Blood Drive Slated For Y Campus; Begins Next Week

Already a state record holder in two-day campus blood drives, the Air Force ROTC Student Corps will conduct its fourth Red Cross blood drive on Thursday and Friday of next week.

A minimum of 800 pints has been pegged with hopes of topping the February drive record of 927 pints.

The Sponsor Corps is cooperating with the Red Cross and the AF-ROTC Cadet Corps in making appointments and doing volunteer work in the mobile unit.

All persons under 21 years of age must have a minor release slip signed by a parent or guardian. Release forms may be obtained when an appointment is made at the Sponsor Corps booth in the Joseph Smith lobby.

The bloodmobile will be operating from 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. in the Banquet hall and Clubroom of the Joseph Smith building Thursday and Friday of next week.

The executive council will form a cabinet, with appointments to be announced this year, including all posts recommended by the government, with several important recommendations.

The cabinet will form a cabinet, with appointments to be announced this year, including all posts recommended by the government, with several important recommendations.

In explaining the position of the council on these two posts,

This honor took the form of an election in which over 50 student body representatives of the universities comprising the Pacific Student Body Presidents Association chose Mr. McKay ASBYU president-elect, to head their organization. The overwhelming popularity of Mr. McKay was evident in the first ballot in which he lacked only one vote of being selected the executive officer.

There are 113 member universities and colleges in the association. Leroy Porter, present ASBYU prexy, in keeping with this spirit of achievement, led the group in a mock meeting on parliamentary procedure and group discussion. Mr. Porter utilized various methods in his approach.

Chorus Concert To Feature LDS Writers

Music of Latter-day Saint composers of the past and present will be featured on Sunday night's concert by the University Chorus under the direction of Crawford Gaites.

The concert is set for 8:15 p.m. in the Joseph Smith auditorium. Accompanists for the chorus are Gordon Greninger, organist, and LaVonne Thomadick, Gene Simpson, and Martha Tingey, pianists. Val Jackson is chorus manager.

First group on the concert includes J. J. Keeler's "A Voice Hath Spoken from the Dust," Leroy Robert's "Chorus," and Alexander Schreiner's "The Pioneers."

B. Cecil Gates' arrangement of "The Lord's Prayer" will begin the second group, which also includes Evan Stephens' "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy," and Mr. Gates' "Hora Breve," accompanied by the BYU Symphony orchestra with Marva Dance, soprano soloist. The text for "Hora Breve" is based on a poem by Jon Beck Shanks, former BYU student. A quartet composed of Annette Black, soprano; Joan Hoppie, alto; Greta Shosson, tenor; and Alan Holyoak, bass, will be featured on "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy."

Ray Leonard of the music faculty will be harpist soloist for the chorus' presentation of "Blessed be the Lord," by Gerrit de Jong, Jr., dean of the college of fine arts. This portion of the concert will also include Tracy Y. Canfield's arrangement of "Oh My Father," and "Every knee shall bend" by Dr. Leon Dallin of the BYU composition department.

W. W. Keeler, who is also vice president of Phillips Petroleum Company, will be the guest of the University on Monday. He will be accompanied by Provo by Henry D. Moore, member of the Council of the Twelve.

Mr. Keeler is former director of Phillips Petroleum Company, and was asked by the present administration to serve as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, a position he declined.

Mr. Keeler is not on a speaking tour, so his speech here is in the nature of something special. Besides urging students to attend, the administration has also invited the general public.

Commerce Seminar Hears 3 Speakers

A seminar, sponsored by the college of commerce, brought in three outstanding men from the field of accounting and business management yesterday.

Speakers represented the National Association of Cost Accountants. The purpose of the seminar was to acquaint students, particularly graduating ones, with what they will find when they get out into the business world. Therefore, an industrial accountant, and industrial executive and a public accountant were obtained.

Each council member takes charge of one AMS-sponsored event during the year and is responsible for its success.

Need for Good Habits Told By Geo. Morris

"We can make a decision on a principle that will last for 10,000 occasions." Thus President George G. Morris, assistant to the Quorum of the Twelve, set the theme for his Wednesday devotional address on habits.

President Morris mentioned the oft-repeated phrase that "Man is a bundle of habits," and then went on to point out the importance of being a bundle of good habits, instead of the opposite.

"Habits are the results of our secret thoughts," stated Elder Morris and "we act because we have thought."

President Morris pointed out that all have the right to the peace of God, and that it is "ours for the asking." He further stated that many of the personal tragedies which occur are needless, and that "we needn't bring upon ourselves unhappiness."

The greatest weapon against unhappiness is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the power of God must enter into our lives if we are to achieve our destiny. It was pointed out by the Church official.

"The spirit of God shapes our secret thoughts," and so shapes our habits. As our habits are shaped so will our lives be shaped.

NEED EXTRA CREDIT? HOME STUDY COURSES OFFERED BY EXTENSION

An opportunity to pick up credit hours while lounging in the comfort of their home during the summer is being offered by Brigham Young University students.

The home study department of the extension division has 170 different courses in 32 departments and all six colleges for correspondence study. Up to 35 hours of correspondence work can count towards a B.S. degree, according to LaShane Edwards, supervisor of Home Study.

Registration for students already enrolled in school will be from June 1 to 6. Correspondence classes are a good way to pick up extra hours, or fill in some classes that will be hard to take next year.

Lost Articles Pile High; Final Call Sent For Collection

Did you lose something? Did you find something? Do you know where the lost and found office is?

Most students know where to turn in articles but the owners don't know where to find them. As evidence, over $5,000 worth of lost articles have been turned in during the last year, estimated Leonard Christensen, BYU security officer. This includes everything from books to shoes.

Many students don't realize that if someone finds their glasses, gloves or wallet, they will turn them in.

Banyan Posts Open To Prospective Yearbook Workers

"Serving BYU can really be fun when you work on the Banyan staff." Openings in every field of yearbook production are available now, according to yearbook editor Mary Anne Carter.

Students interested in any one of the yearbook posts, editorial, art, or just all-around staff membership should drop in the Banyan office in the Student Center.

Application cards will be on one of the desks to fill out and leave in the office. Talent is fine, but the most essential qualities needed are dependability and willingness to work and have fun. Miss Carter sincerely invites students to make the 1954 Banyan their book by taking part in its production.

Modern Dancers Ready Fri. Concert

Many regard modern dance as an amateurish pastime for girls. This concept will be disapproved when the Orcheisla, national dance fraternity, presents their concert May 22 in the Smith auditorium. Of the 41 members of the fraternity, 15 are men students, which is the largest number of men in any chapter of the fraternity.

Several outstanding features may be noted about the concert. Choreography has been done by Mrs. Shirley Russen Tuke, modern dance instructor and by dance students themselves. Mrs. Ririe, a new faculty member, received her training in New York and is an outstanding exponent of modern interpretive dance. She has made extensive guest appearances on stage and television.

Special guest attraction will be a group from Virginia Tanner's Children's Dance Theatre at McCune School of Music, branch of BYU. This group will be brought to Provo to exhibit what can be done in children's dance on a professional level, and is rated an outstanding presentation.

A second guest will be Joan Jones Woodbury, director of modern dance at the University of Utah, who will join Mrs. Ririe in a duet reminiscent of old vaudeville, "On the Boards." This is an exchange number and was presented in Salt Lake City on the U of U Orcheisla Concert. "K" Dunkley, who taught dance for two years at Reed College, Idaho, and who is a student of dance at BYU this quarter, will join Mrs. Ririe in a duet. This dance was presented at the Utah Opera Association production of "Amal and the Night Visitors" directed by Carl Fuerst, and is being presented again by popular request.

Pat Boyce will present a primitive ritual dance of the Incas Indians. The accompaniment for this dance was composed by Miss Boyce in cooperation with Curtis Landay. It is a composition for percussion instruments and piano.

Two members of Orcheisla have trained at the famous Perry-Mansfield Summer School of Dance. They are Jean Dixon and "K" Dunkley. Miss Julia Carter, a member of the faculty who will dance with the group, has also studied there.

The A Cappella Choir, under the direction of Newell R. Weir, will join with the Orcheisla to present "The Lord's Prayer." Outstanding students of the speech department will also lend their talents in this cooperative evening of culture.

Designer for the production is Keith Nelson. Accompanists to be used are Mary Louise Anderson, Jim Conis, Louise Marsden, pianist; and David Dalton, violin.

The concert will involve work of the Y's physical education department with over 600 students having received modern dance instruction this year. Orcheisla members are among the best of those students, being chosen by rigid tryouts.

Because of interest of so many students in dance it has been announced that next year it will be possible to have a minor in dancing. This will be the first time at BYU and the course will cover every type of dancing, including modern, tap, social, folk, and square dancing.

C-47 Flight Time Racked-up By BYU's Junior Birdmen

by James W. Brinham — UNIVERSITY Staff Writer

"Just like climbing a mountain only faster. You have to swallow often," said Cadet Lorin Cook, a freshman from Orem, Utah. Along with comments on the smoothness of the ride, this was the most apparent response of orientation flights made by some 250 Brigham Young University Air Force ROTC cadets during the first weeks.

Other cadets observed, however, that he may already have had his "air legs," since many of the prospective birdmen had mild cases of the "burps" while in flight.

Orientation flights are part of the ROTC training curriculum and it is expected that every cadet will have an opportunity to fly.

"Gooney Birds"

All flights were made from Hill Air Force Base at Ogden. Most schedules were flown to Provo and return, although some flights were made over Cache Valley, Great Salt Lake and Wendover in the twin-engine C-47s. About 20 cadets at a time were flown in the "Gooney Birds," as the airframe affectionately call the plane. It is the service counterpart of the familiar DC-3 airliner.

Ground Operations Air Science instructors accompanied the cadets aloft to explain mechanics of the aircraft and flight procedures. Each cadet had his turn going forward to the cockpit and observing instru-

Flick on Russian Ballet Troupe Set for Tomorrow

Movies of the famous Russian Ballet Troupe, which will be performing in Paris, France this summer, will be shown tomorrow in room 269 Physical Science building beginning at 6:30 p.m. This film depicts the rise of the young ballet student, Maria Redina.

The film story of Maria Redina shows her graceful and beautiful innovations of recording technique of "Sleeping Beauty" and "Swan Lake." Also featured besides these two numbers is the music of Tchaikovsky and Pushkov.

Student Legislators Practice At State Capitol Building

Prospective stateimen from Utah's three colleges enjoyed preliminary practice when they convened in the senate chambers of the state capitol building last weekend for the Utah College Legislature.

Nineteen BYU students, chosen from the Forensic club and Stewart Grow's political science class on the American legislative system, represented the Y at the two-day meet. Dr. J. LaVay Batesman of the speech department was in charge of the BYU activities at the meet.

The University of Utah hosted the affair and Utah is scheduled as host next season. Richard Devey, incoming Forensic president at the Y, was named president of the annual activity for the coming year.

Following the address of Governor J. Bracken Lee to the student legislative body Friday morning, in which he discussed his philosophy of government, students presented and discussed the following bills.

1. Proposition for a law relieving a Sunday closing for all or stipulated classes of business.
2. Mandatory construction of sewage disposal plants.
2. An FYU law for Utah.
4. A bill dealing with the problem of education.
5. Resolution requesting Gov. Lee to call a special session of the legislature to consider the problem of public schools.

Radio Funnyman To Give Benefit Program Saturday

The Art Linkletter show, "People are Funny," will be at the fieldhouse Saturday at 8 p.m. sponsored by East Sharon Shale building project benefit.

The show will run for two hours and will be strictly a stage performance. More than 50,000 people have appeared before Art Linkletter's microphone in the last 20 years and with this wealth of experience Mr. Linkletter brings his noted program to BYU.

So far on "People are Funny," the contestants have gone into a series of funny lines, jumped from high-flying airplanes, been dunked into a barrel of molasses, and tackled all Americans in the midst of a football game. There is a standing $10,000 reward for persons who can prove that the contestants don't do the things they are said to have done.

The contestants who appear on Art Linkletter's show are insured for $100,000 before the beginning of the program, but they are not expected to need it. "There has never been a mishap to injure our contestants yet," said the renowned master of ceremonies.

Tickets are priced at $1 to $2 for students with activity cards. The price to others will be set by the East Sharon Shale on a donation basis.

Speech Group Affiliates

BRIGHAM YOUNG

CALLING OUR SHOTS

Part of Brigham Young's unprecedented recent growth is certainly due to the building program of the University. We're proud as anyone else of the "skyline" the Y is gaining—for the science building, fieldhouse, student service center, housing units and other buildings.

Because we support the University wholeheartedly, and will all ways do so, we feel some comments on the subject of campus planning are in order.

Despite the functional appearance of some of the new buildings on campus, there is nothing functional about some of their facilities, and the student service center has some obvious drawbacks. Three separate basements, however much they compartmentalize and separate the offices, do not really add to the utility of the building, which was intended as a service center. Construction of the building is shoddy in places. At least two offices have structural defects, with walls that allow water to seep up from the floor during wet weather, and that have already begun to crack.

However attractive the metal stair railings in the science building are, they aren't doing the job for which they were doubtless designed. Within six months after installation, they were beginning to crack and sway. In several places in the science and student service buildings, jagged cracks have appeared in the floors. If marble chip floors aren't as durable as other types, why install them?

Three years ago students began to groan when they saw the absurdly low drinking fountains in the Science building. The mistake wasn't repeated in the service center, but why not raise the fountains in the Science building to the point they belong. And install a few pencil sharpeners along with the candy machines?

On the campus as a whole, favorite complaint has been the lack of lawns. The North building is a case in point. Even though a temporary building when it was put up in 1947, there is still no grass around it. Just dirt.

Sidewalk planning is another curious matter. Why put such poor workmanship into them? And plant trees so close to them that both walks and trees will cause trouble in a very few years?

Poor planning and construction methods aren't ever justified. The buildings that house Brigham Young University during its greatest years should need to be fit for their job.

The World Today . . .

'Statesmen'

by Art Hardy

A politician has been defined as one who thinks of the next election—a statesman as one who thinks of the next generation.

The Republicans are now having their try at running our country and in the process, the politicians are being separated from the statesmen. Without too much pessimism, it seems very likely that the Republicans will turn out to be little different from the Democrats—politicians.

The issue that shows the shape of things to come is the budget. It's a stumbling block to all would-be statesmen. The Republican party campaigned on a balance the budget platform; candidate Eisenhower said he would reduce the budget by billions and balance it, both parties promised a tax reduction. It's not quite fair to put this all down as merely campaign promises to beguile the voters, but when the Secretary of the Treasury tells congress that the budget cannot be balanced this year, it has an old familiar ring. Didn't the Democrats sing that song too? Just what year will the budget be balanced?

The Democrats always had emergency to justify putting the nation deeper and deeper into debt. First it was the depression, then the war, then the threat of communism, and now the Republicans have adopted national security as their excuse for their inability to balance the budget. All these reasons may be good and valid; they may be only temporary (when the world is normal again, we will balance the budget). Still, it is hard to escape the feeling that this is rationalizing. Could it be that the real reason is a desire of the politicians to stay in office? Maybe balancing the budget is not as popular as spending ourselves into prosperity.

There's no sense in telling how many billion the country is in debt. Nobody can count that high anyway. Let's just say that we are in hock up to our eyeballs, and that if the debt gets much bigger, we will find it a little hard to see.

Let's hope that a statesman appears while we carry still see.

BYU Progression to Come From Cooperative Effort

by the Editors

Over the past two weeks the UNIVERSITY has attempted on this page to evaluate the academic, social, and spiritual strengths and weaknesses of Brigham Young University.

It has been a stab at a problem that requires the thought and consideration of every student, faculty member, and administrator on this campus. No one would want us to think that BYU is a paragon of perfection, yet all would certainly desire it to be.

With that common goal in front of us, it is well that we face up to the actual weaknesses of the University, and it is just as wise to realize where we are strong and take advantage of those points.

Reviewing

In review, may we recall what the UNIVERSITY survey of student and faculty opinion considered our greatest weaknesses. Academically, the library situation seems to be the most pressing. Out-dated reference material, a very small amount of reference material in many fields, and crowded conditions are the main areas of complaint. It is our hope that the administration has placed a new library high on the campus expansion program priority list.

Raising the standard and quality of teaching is a slow process, but something that needs to be done and is evidently receiving the attention of the higher-ups. The addition of courses in engineering and nursing is another step forward. It is hoped that law and possibly a better pre-med or pre-dental course will follow.

Socially, what can be said? Brigham Young University offers as much or more social and extra-curricular activities as any other university in the nation. The general opinion indicates that this can be both good and bad, depending on the individual student. Its greater value lies in bringing the student close to the school and into activity with other people.

More People Active

One area for betterment exists in bringing more people into activity. There are more than enough activities, but never are there enough different students participating. The cry that there are too many things to go to may be valid, but the majority of students interviewed would rather have it remain that way and thus leave the responsibility with the student to ration his activities.

In dealing with the spiritual side of BYU we come to an intangible that is hard to express. Most people on campus feel the unique "spirit" that is here. It stems, of course, from the common goals, ideals, and beliefs that are held by the majority.

We don't wish, however, to gloss over the religious and spiritual side of BYU life. There are problems. Although not major, the question of liberalism and radicalism is present here. An extreme liberal and an extreme radical are both dangerous. There is no need for either.

Peculiar Position

Latter-day Saint beliefs put us in a peculiar position—and religious instruction on this campus should teach us to live normally in the world in spite of that peculiar position.

The UNIVERSITY editors realize the incompleteness of this series of articles, but they are offered at the end of this school year with the hope of provoking thought and adding to the spiritual, social, and academic progression of Brigham Young University.

Photographic Group Returns From 'Hole' With Photos, Rats

A Brigham Young University photographic expedition returned Sunday evening from Hole in the Rock, southern Utah site of a so-called "impossible" covered wagon crossing of a sandstone mountain and a turbulent river by early Mormon pioneers.

The expedition, headed by Clarence Tyndall, director of Audio-Visual Aids, took moving picture and still-camera shots of the Hole in the Rock area for a forthcoming historical film depicting the route of a rugged group of early Saints sent by Brigham Young to colonize San Juan county.

The 13-person filming party consisted of Mr. Tyndall, Dr. Morris A. Shirra, and Dr. D. Edman Beck, BYU faculty members; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Forsyth, Provo; Mrs. Leona M. Kemper, Barnwell, Alta., Can.; John Green, Leithridge, Alta., Can.; Earl McBride, Burley, Ida.; Kenneth Toomey, Green River, Wyo.; Robert L. Frazier, Springville; Samuel Baird, a noted BYU alumnus, Salt Lake City; Garth Ulbel, Mountain View, Alta., Can.; and Cleon M. Kotter, Shelley, Ida.

Early Pioneers

At Hole in the Rock, in the early days, the determined band of pioneers sent their 25-wagon train over an estimated two miles of hazardous, rocky slopes—that drop 2000 feet in altitude—to the banks of the Colorado River. This feat was accomplished by carving steps into the solid rock, and by raising platform forms of rock along the base of the gorge to support an improvised "chute-chute" system.

Each wagon had a rope tied to the axle, and was lowered (with the whole camp hanging onto the free end) down an initial 40-foot drop-off, and thence to the bottom of the narrow canyon. Hole in the Rock, a funnel-shaped pass, is bounded on both sides by nearly perpendicular cliffs, and often rises to heights greater than 45 degrees.

Captured Rats

Dr. Beck accompanied the photographic expedition for zoological purposes (and doubled as a guide for the party). At the Hole in the Rock area he captured a sizeable quantity of rats, which will be used to determine the means of transmission of Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

1953-54 Catalogs Are Published

The 1953-54 general catalogs now on sale in the bookstores, have had more changes and are more comprehensive than any other catalogs heretofore released by the school.

All courses are listed alphabetically, which will make easier the finding of information. Previously listing have been under colleges.

One of the additions is 56 pages of pictures which have been placed in eight page units. Many are four page pictures. Views are of campus, departmental, and classroom scenes.

A full color photo of the campus appears on the cover. This is the first time that a colored cover has been used. The cover is the same one used by the summer school catalog.

The cover was the only part of the book printed on the campus press. The printer was printed by the Deseret News.

Professor Clinton F. Larsen headed the committee which edited and compiled this book. Copies are available in the bookstore.

Rejected Wye Stories Can Be Picked Up Now

All manuscripts which have not been selected for use in the Spring issue of the Wye Magazine may now be picked up from the wire baskets in the Wye office. The contributors of accepted works have been notified.

Evaluations by the editorial staffs should prove to be interesting and useful to all student writers.

The Wye staff will not be responsible for manuscripts which are not picked up before June 5 at 6 p.m.

EXTENSION OFFERS VARIED CLASSES TO STUDENTS NOT GOING TO SCHOOL

Education does not end when the sun goes down or when a person graduates from college. Seeing the lights on to the wee hours of the night might make a person think that the janitors were working late. That may be possible, but it is more likely one of the night classes from the extension division.

This division renders such services as providing guest lecturers, home study courses, tours, night classes, residence classes, and special courses of study including classes from the colleges of fine arts, applied science and arts and sciences.

These classes appeal to the people who have to work or who aren't free to follow a normal course of education. The classes offer full credit and are taught by many of the regular instructors from the BYU.

The extension division also sends out guest lecturers to various groups who desire them and the only cost to the group is the expense of speaker transportation.

The most publicized feature of the extension division is its tours. Regular groups travel to Mexico, Europe, Palestine and to such historical spots or routes as the Church History Tour which will trace the route followed by the Mormon pioneers. These tours usually are held in the summer.

The evening will be spent in games and swimming. The members of the Cosmopolitan Club will entertain the group with a program in the latter part of the evening.

A bus has been secured for transportation and will leave at 5:15 p.m. Monday. It is requested that no private cars be taken. Transportation will cost 50 cents per person.

Especially invited are all foreign students not affiliated with these organizations.

All those planning to attend should sign up in the Joseph Smith lobby today or tomorrow before 4 p.m. Transportation will leave from the west lawn of the Smith building.

Working with Mr. Leilegan are: Marvin D. Follett, president of the IRC; Gunnar Sorenson, president of the Cosmopolitan Club; Norman Smith, chairman of the Correspondence Committee; and Tom Nakama, president of Hawaiian Club.

VISITING ARTISTS AND EDUCATORS ADD TO SUMMER SCHOOL PROGRAM

What happens at Brigham Young when the majority of students go home? Most students have no idea about the happenings on the campus during the months that they go home to recuperate for next year.

Dr. Ariel S. Ballif, dean of the summer school, feels that many students could find many advantages in looking into the possibilities of attending summer sessions.

In the speech department for example, Dr. Harold I. Hansen stated today that several prominent people in the speech field would be here as guests during the summer quarter. Elo French, well-known actress, will be here as a guest artist and Dr. Jon Eliason will be here as guest lecturer in the field of speech and hearing rehabilitation.

Miss French has gained recognition as community theater actress and also as a television actress. She will be guest star in one of the University Theater summer school productions. Miss French has had eight seasons as a summer stock actress, many years in the community theaters at Cedar Rapids, Ia., and at Saginaw, Mich. She was also staff actress for the Cleveland Playhouse for four years. She has been on several television stations as an actress.

In addition to the play starring Miss French, the University Theater will put on "The Glass Menagerie" for Leadership Week. On July 4, the speech department will present two major pageants, "Behold America," a patriotic pageant, and one depicting the life of Christ. These pageants will run from July 1 to 4.

Dr. Jon Eliason from Queens College in New York will be here as special instructor in speech and hearing rehabilitation. Along with Dr. Eliason, instructors in the speech department will be Dr. Alonzo Morley, Dr. LaVar Bateman, Professors Sensenbath, Kathryn Pardoe and Dr. Harold I. Hansen.

The group going to the Hill Cumorah Pageant will have theoretical instruction here and will go workshop tasks at Palmyra.

Geology Field Trip

Geological classes and other interested students or friends are invited to the Brigham Young University geology field trip, which will get underway Saturday, 8 a.m., from the upper campus.

Chartered buses will take the members to such points as Great Salt Lake, Bingham Canyon, Utah Valley, and several Utah canyons.

Interested persons should pay $2.50 to a sponsoring member of the geology faculty no later than May 20.

A lunch should be brought since no lunch stops are planned.

Empty Cake Plates Prove of No Value

The Y Day committee wishes to express its appreciation to those who donated cakes. The cakes are all gone, but many of the cake plates are left. Owners are urged to pick them up at 731 N. 2 E. as soon as possible.

All Units Urged To Elect Prexies

All student organizations on campus should elect their president or a summer representative this quarter, and register the name and summer address of the individual with Miss Woodward in the coordinators office as soon as possible.
